You have up to 60,000 thoughts/day. Not only that, 80% are negative and 95% are repetitive. That's a lot of stuff going on!

What are you doing with all those thoughts? Are they running around in your head like unsupervised children, chasing each other, hitting each other, taunting, and poking each other?

Athletes, are you paying attention to those thoughts when you're training and competing? Are your thoughts helping or hindering?

Coaches/Parents, what are you thinking when you watch your athletes/kids train and compete? Are your thoughts helping or hindering?

You will learn:

- Why a "downer" thought cycle decreases performance
- How an "upbeat" thought cycle increases performance

Make your thoughts work for you rather than against you.
